PROCUREMENT FRAMEWORK (Latest Version) for WORLD BANK AIDED PROJECTS

(With technical support from The World Bank)

PPPAI's

STAKEHOLDERS:

Discover the power of the World Bank Procurement Framework in achieving sustainable development goals through inclusive and accountable procurement processes.

Overview:

PPPAI and ISM-INDIA are conducting a 2-weeks ONLINE training program on The Procurement Framework for World Bank Aided Projects with technical support from the World Bank.

The World Bank Procurement Framework supports Countries to achieve value for money with integrity in delivering sustainable development through inclusive, accountable, and coordinated procurement processes.

The world bank's procurement framework aims to maximize the strategic role of procurement to achieve development effectiveness goals by:

- Enhancing Efficiency: Recognizing the growing demand for improved efficiency in public expenditure, the framework aims to enable countries to optimize their spending. This optimization allows for increased investments in vital public services like education, healthcare, and infrastructure, consequently fostering enhanced development outcomes.
- Modernizing procurement: The framework seeks to revamp procurement practices by prioritizing flexibility, quality, and maximizing the value derived from public expenditure. By emphasizing adaptability to individual country contexts, the modernization efforts aim to ensure that procurement processes are fit-for-purpose.
- Strengthening National Procurement Systems: The framework promotes the empowerment of national procurement systems to effectively support sustainable development objectives. By strengthening these systems, countries can better align their procurement practices with their long-term development goals.
- Enhancing Transparency: The framework advocates for increased transparency in public spending. Leveraging information and communication technology (ICT) and other innovative tools in public procurement, it aims to provide greater visibility into the utilization of public funds, ensuring accountability and preventing corruption.

The 10 business days training conducted by Institute for Supply Management India (ISM - India) on The World Bank Procurement Framework (latest version) is really educative to me as a procurement practitioner who has no experience on The World Bank Procurement Framework, and it is a capacity building that had enhanced my knowledge generally in procurement processes and specifically in The World Bank Procurement and Contract management Regulations.
